

Is “That’s Enough About Ethnography” Enough? Re-Orienting Anthropology for the Future

Date: 14 September 2017, 2-5 pm

Goettingen, Seminar room in the Old Villa
Hermann-Föge-Weg 12, 37073 Goettingen

British anthropologist Tim Ingold’s (2008, 2014, 2017) writings have generated considerable interest among social-cultural anthropologists working in the different national traditions that have shaped our discipline, and which our discipline has helped shape. This mini-workshop responds to Ingold’s article: “That’s Enough about Ethnography.”

Drawing on their past and future works four anthropologists – IRFAN AHMAD, PATRICK EISENLOHR, NATHANIEL ROBERTS and ARPITA ROY – critically and historically discuss Ingold’s propositions about the salience, shape and value of ethnography and anthropology in order to renew their potential and promise for the future.
